DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Shinohara (U.S. Patent No. 6067298).

- With respect to claims 1, 6, 10, 12, & 17, Shinohara teaches an apparatus for switching packets from a network (e.g. Fig. 1), the apparatus comprising:

an ingress receiver that receives packets from the network ("inbound packets") (block 20 in Fig. 1), the packets being destined for an associated output queue (each buffers 24 corresponds to buffers 31 as show in Fig. 1);

a switch fabric coupled to receive the inbound packets from the ingress receiver (block 102 in Fig. 1);

and an output traffic manager coupled to receive packets from the switch fabric ("outbound packets") (block 110 and 111 in Fig. 1), wherein the output traffic manager includes at least one queue (queue 31 in Fig. 1), the output traffic manager selectively stores outbound packets into a selected queue (col. 7, lines 24-27) and selectively drops outbound packets when the selected queue is at a certain fullness level (col. 3, lines 37-44), and approximately when the output traffic manager drops outbound packets or is about to drop the outbound packets, the output traffic manager communicates to the ingress receiver to drop inbound packets destined for that queue (col. 4, lines 5-17).

- With respect to claims 2, 11, & 16, Shinohara also teaches wherein the output traffic manager identifies at least the designation of imminently droppable or dropped outbound packets, and wherein the ingress receiver drops inbound packets based on an identified designation (e.g. output data controller monitors buffers and communicates back to input data controller, col. 4, lines 5-17).

- With respect to claims 3, & 18, Shinohara discloses wherein the designation comprises a port address to the network, or a class of service or virtual private network (e.g. the information of cells as Fig. 2).

- With respect to claims 7 and 22, Shinohara teaches wherein the ingress receiver discontinues inbound packet drop after a predetermined time (col. 14, lines 38-46).

- With respect to claims 8, 13, & 21, Shinohara discloses wherein the output traffic manager uses the switch fabric to communicate to the ingress receiver to drop inbound packets (block 102 in Fig. 1).

- With respect to claims 9, & 14, Shinohara also discloses wherein the output traffic manager uses a dedicated communications bus to communicate to the ingress receiver to drop inbound packets (line 70 in Fig. 1).

- With respect to claims 15, & 23, Shinohara teaches a method of reducing packet traffic through a switching fabric (e.g. the method controlling the buffering as Fig. 1), the method comprising:

transmitting each packet to the switching fabric (e.g. cells go through block 102 in Fig. 1); selectively queuing packets from the switching fabric (queues 103 in Fig. 1);

detecting imminent or active dropping of packets ("dropped packets") due to a queue being full (block 115);

signaling to drop inbound packets destined for the queue (line 60 in Fig. 1); and dropping inbound packets destined for the queue (col. 4, lines 5-17).

Response to Amendment

3. Applicant's arguments, filed 4-28-03, with respect to the rejection(s) of claim(s) 1-23 under Khacherian have been fully considered and are persuasive. Therefore, the rejection has been withdrawn. However, upon further consideration, a new ground(s) of rejection is made in view of Shinohara.
